TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, - 1893.

Only 38 more days of Harrison.

The New York Tribune's Almanac for 1893 locates the Capital of Kentucky at Lexington.

The successor to Senator Carlisle will have but two years to serve, as the latter's term would have expired in 1896.

Senator James Smith, of New Jersey, will be the seventh Smith to sit in the Senate, but the first since Delazon Smith in 1868.

Mrs. N. B. Forrest, widow of the late Confederate General, died at Memphis Saturday aged 96 years. She lived with her only son Capt. Wm. Forrest.

"Buck" Kilgore, of Texas, is after the Mexican mescal. This is the $175000 plan for which it is believed "Quinine Jim" McKenzie's measure has been taken.

Senator-elect Murphy, of New York, says he will not oppose Mr. Cleveland, but will keep himself in accord with the Democratic administration. Reports to the contrary are unauthorized.

With the single exception of Jan. 5, 1884, Sunday, Jan. 15, was the coldest day at Louisville since 1867. The mercury registered 10 1/2 degrees below, six or eight degrees colder than it was in Hopkinsville.

Jim Edwards' new paper, the Elkton Times, now in its third week, gets better as it grows older and now presents as pretty and neat a get-up as any weekly in the State. Editorially it is bound to be bright and readable as long as its present editor is at the helm.

The Inquirer is working to secure Sam Jones at Owensboro some time in the near future, so well pleased were the people with his recent lectures. Mr. Jones will go to Memphis February 1 and later in the spring has engagements for Paducah and Bowling Green. He will lecture here one night about the middle of February.

Gov. Brown has signed the new Governor's Fair bill and reapportioned all the old Commissioners excepting Mr. Allison, one of the Republicans. Dr. A. D. James, representative from Muhlenberg county, was named in Mr. Allison's place and promptly resigned his seat in the Legislature. Speaker Moore has called a special election in that county for Feb. 4 and as Muhlenberg is a close county there may be another vote in the coming Democratic caucus before a decision is reached.

Female suffrage exists in Wyoming and the fact that a large club of women voters has endorsed a saloon-keeper for United States Marshal, is attracting a good deal of attention in the papers. The general testimony is that female suffrage has proven a disappointment in the only State where it has been tried. It has done nothing to purify politics or promote moral reforms, further than to take Wyoming out of the Republican column.

The special committee of the National Editorial Association, appointed by the general committee last October to select a time and place for holding the next annual meeting, has decided to hold its next meeting in Chicago from May 16 to 29, the first week of the Association to be devoted to the election of officers, etc., and the second week to participation in the world's Public Press Congress, which convenes on May 22. Over 22,000 invitations have been sent out for the meeting.

The election of Stephen M. White gives the Democrats 12 votes. Wyoming is also counted out of the doubtful list and will vote a Democrat, though the caucus was deadlocked now. Montana has a Democratic majority and nothing but management can prevent the Democratic 44th Senator from being elected there. This would give the Democrats a majority in both Kansas and Nebraska who will vote with the Democrats in the Senate, so that a safe majority is assured without the six Senators who will come in as Democrats as the territories can be admitted.

The popular vote for President was as follows:
Cleveland 55,679,900
Harrison 5,176,611
Tilden 1,025,000
Bland 258,347
Harrison received 254,097 votes less than he did in 1888, while Cleveland had 31,768 votes more. Texas votes to be the banner Democratic State, while Pennsylvania holds relation to the Republican party. Weaver, the People's party candidate, didn't receive a single vote. Bidwell, the Prohibitionist, did not receive any votes. Deland, the Socialist, received 10 votes.

The Senatorial Contest.

The withdrawal of Mr. Clay, followed by the announcement of Gov. Brown that he would not enter the race for Senator, leaves the fight a triangular one between Lindsay, McCleary and Stone. Conservative estimates place the relative strength of the candidates at the following figures: Lindsay 38 to 41, McCleary 33 to 35, Stone 23 to 27. There will be 90 votes in the caucus and the winner must have 50 votes. Judge Lindsay's friends are trying to force the fighting and secure a caucus at once, but Chairman Anderson is a McCleary man and is not likely to call the caucus until sometime next week. A protracted contest will hurt Lindsay, as it will give the opposition time to consolidate. The fight will eventually come down to a struggle between the friends and enemies of the State administration. Every opponent of the Brown administration, led by Auditor Norman, is backing Judge Lindsay, who has been the recognized leader of the anti-administration faction in the State Senate. On the other hand the friends of Gov. McCleary and Capt. Stone include the personal followings of the State officers, of Senator Carlisle, Mr. Watterson, the State Central Committee and the members of the Appellate Court who sustained the Governor in his famous "final passage" veto. Added to their own strong supports, their influence are a power and if Judge Lindsay is not defeated in the end it will be a surprise to all well posted politicians. Aside from these political considerations, there is no popular opposition to any of the candidates. Judge Lindsay's long public record and his wide reputation as a great lawyer have given him a firm hold upon the good opinion of his fellow citizens and though he would lack experience in National Legislation no one doubts that he would in time rank with the ablest members of the Senate.

Gov. McCleary has made a success at everything he has ever undertaken. As Speaker of the lower house of the Legislature, as Governor of the State, as Congressman and quite recently as a member of the European Monetary Conference he made a reputation that his friends are proud of.

Capt. Stone has also been Speaker, has been eight years in Congress and has grown from his first entrance into politics. He is honest, sensible and well informed and is not only a Penrynville man but as a farmer, a Baptist and a one-legged Confederate soldier. It is possible that a dead lock in the caucus may bring some dark horse to the front, but this is hardly likely. The friends of Judge Lindsay are already getting in bad temper and have had one or two scraps with their opponents. On the other hand McCleary and Stone are working in harmony with each other and their forces may be expected to unite sooner or later.

Emile Zola's thrilling and dramatic story of the Franco-Prussian War, entitled "The Storming of the Mill," is published complete, with illustrations, in the February number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. This tale is a revelation to readers who have hitherto had the misfortune to know the great French novelist only through that sinister and somber part of his work represented by "Nana" and "Germinal." The leading article of this number of "Frank Leslie's" is a vivid historical paper upon "The Continental Congress," by Richard B. Kimball, LL. D. It has a timely as well as an intrinsic interest, because, as the veteran author says, "the inauguration of the World's Fair at Chicago recalls irresistibly, by contrast, the scene at Philadelphia, where, in 1774, a small body of men chosen from each of the thirteen colonies met to unite in resistance against Great Britain." The main artistic feature of the number is the superbly illustrated article on "Corsica," by Frank Barrett; and the literary papers are A. Oakley Hall's "Romance of St. John's Gate, London," and Henry Tyrrell's sketch of Remy de Gourmont. Charles writes interestingly of "The Evolution of a Dictatorship, in Costa Rica; Francis M. Smith, of 'Famous Old Villains'; and Ernest Ingersoll of 'Big Game in Europe.' Daniel Dana's serial story of 'The Great Chastity Diamonds' is brought to a dramatic conclusion.

THE BALD HEADED CLUB.

"The club will come to order," said President Claggett, as the two hands on his Waterbury indicated sixty minutes past eleven o'clock.

"The club will come to order, and when I say order I mean order with a big O. The first man who disturbs the proceedings while the present occupant of the chair holds the gavel will have his symmetry of countenance permanently marred. I have provided myself with an assortment of projectiles ranging from a rotten potato to a half brick, and when I have to remonstrate with a galeot I will do it with a missile that will make an impression. It is all in the way you start, and I propose to start my administration in a way that will indicate at once that there will be no further foolishness in the deliberations of this august body. I have been elected President of this club and I propose to rule it like a South American dictator. You hear that, pups? If any low-down, flea-bitten hound in this gang don't like what I say he can get up on his hind feet and lump it. I am in the saddle and propose to stay there. All the levity and monkey business you have heretofore indulged in will have to be stopped. It has come to such a pass that the most common place business transactions in the club cannot be recorded in our official organ without a grin being plastered on every countenance in the municipality. This is going to be stopped, or I will break every backbone, spine and vertebra in your backs. Do you catch on, Bud? Above all things I warn you not to attempt any reflections on my style of individual beauty. If at any time here or elsewhere you hear any man speak disrespectfully of my claims to personal pulchritude report his name to me and notify the corner to keep in easy reach. I am a peaceable citizen when let alone but it is dangerous to stir me up. Even Sam Jones said not a word against the man who wears a bald head. Ours is about the only class that escaped his shining lance. Where is there a bald headed man who is not proud of the polished dome that decorates the upper story of his anatomy? I would not exchange the roof over my head for the head of any other man. I am so much opposed to here that I don't even eat rabbit. I prefer brains on the inside of my head to capillary sage-brush on its exterior. The absence of hair is the highest honor. You never saw a bald donkey. You never saw a bald monkey.
